

Press Release
September 22, 2008

Lee's Garden Center's Land of Oz celebrates its fifth anniversary

In the month of October hundreds of young children will find their way to Lee's Garden Center in LaRue County to experience the Wizard, Dorothy, and all their friends.

Land of Oz will be especially exciting due to the many new happenings at Lee's Garden Center. From the scare crow mountain to bucking bulls one trip to Oz will not be enough for children of all ages.

As always your time at Lee's will be packed with learning activities and non-stop fun. We have an exciting storm machine, the feed store, recycling activities, and the wizard's theater. The animals are back by popular demand including the donkey tank, the Angus cow, goats, sheep, and the Dixie chicks along with the bunny boys.

This year the Land of Oz Days will focus on fitness and safety, so bring your energy drink and come out to the Land of Oz only at Lee's Garden Center. While at Lee's Garden Center check out the many other sites in LaRue County such as Lincoln's birthplace and the environmental educational park.

Lee's Garden Center in Hodgenville, owned by Scotty and Robin Lee, has been in business for over 20 years. In that time they have gone from growing 60 acres of processing peepers to the unique area garden center they are today, growing 10 acres of produce items with a "Kentucky's freshest" concept store selling local area produced foods.

For more information on Lee's Garden Center's Land of Oz contact the store at (270) 358-9897 or visit the website at www.leesgardencenter.com